WRIGHT, Circuit Judge: Two unions—the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers (BLE) and the United Transportation Union (UTU)—object to the Interstate Commerce Commission's interpretation of labor issues arising from ICC's approval of a railroad consolidation.

The unions claim that, when the dust settled from the consolidation, certain railroads had effectively squeezed them out of their previous role in determining the crews used on particular routes. At the time, in early 1983, the unions objected and argued that the railroads' actions violated statutory labor protections. Since the railroads responded that ICC had given them full crew selection rights in the consolidation approval, the unions appealed to ICC for an order clarifying that its general consolidation approval did not affect previous labor arrangements, including crew selection rights.

In two decisions ICC rejected the unions' arguments. It maintained that the railroads' intentions on crew selection had been clear in the consolidation as approved and that ICC's authority to exempt transactions from legal obstacles, 49 U.S.C. § 11341(a) (1982), immunized these crew selection prerogatives from later attack.

The unions now petition this court to vacate those ICC decisions. Four railroads—the Denver & Rio Grande Western (D&RGW), the Missouri-Kansas-Texas (MKT), the Missouri Pacific (MP), and the Union Pacific (UP)—are intervening in support of the Commission.

Because we find that ICC made no semblance of a showing that the exemption was necessary, as required by the exemption authority section, we vacate the ICC decisions.

I. BACKGROUND

A. Legal Framework

This case presents the intersection of two statutory mandates—ICC's exclusive authority to approve rail consolidations under the Interstate Commerce Act and the statutory protection for rail labor employees under both the Railway Labor Act and the Interstate Commerce Act. The unions argue that (1) ICC did not show a necessity for waiving the Railway Labor Act in the exercise of its Interstate Commerce Act approval authority, and (2) ICC cannot waive the Interstate Commerce Act's labor protection conditions in the exercise of that approval authority. Ultimately, we find the Railway Labor Act argument dispositive, and we vacate the ICC decisions on that basis. To fully understand the texture of this dispute, however, it is necessary to examine the Interstate Commerce Act labor protection conditions as well.

1. ICC's approval authority. Under the Interstate Commerce Act, ICC has exclusive authority to approve certain consolidations and mergers. 49 U.S.C. § 11341 et seq. (1982). The Act enumerates the types of transactions to which ICC's approval authority applies, id. § 11343, and the considerations that must guide ICC, id. § 11344. Most significantly for this appeal, "[a] carrier, corporation, or person participating in that approved or exempted transaction is exempt from the antitrust laws and from all other law, including State and municipal law, as necessary to let that person carry out the transaction, hold, maintain, and operate property, and exercise control or franchises acquired through the transaction." Id. § 11341(a). Thus ICC has the power to approve a transaction and exempt its participants from legal obstacles that would impede its fruition.

In the exercise of this authority to exempt consolidations from the constraints of applicable statutes, ICC has certain ultimate constraints on its broad authority. First, there is a necessity component to the plenary authority: the statute specifies that ICC may exempt transactions from applicable laws "as necessary" for completion of the transaction. Second, as with any agency action, ICC's exercise of its authority must comport with the requirements of reasoned decisionmaking. See generally United States v. ICC, 396 U.S. 491 (1970).

2. Labor protection requirements. Statutory protections for railroad employees have received considerable congressional attention. Two important statutory vehicles for the current labor protection requirements are the Railway Labor Act, 45 U.S.C. § 151 et seq. (1982), and the Interstate Commerce Act's labor protection section, 49 U.S.C. § 11347.

The Railway Labor Act creates a highly structured system for administering and resolving labor disputes. In passing the Railway Labor Act Congress sought, in part,

"[t]o avoid any interruption to commerce * * *, to forbid any limitation upon freedom of association among employees * * *, [and] to provide for the prompt and orderly settlement of all disputes concerning rates of pay, rules, or working conditions[.]" 45 U.S.C. § 151a. The statute specifies eleven general duties of rail carriers, id. § 152. It also creates a variety of mechanisms to settle rail labor disputes—a National Railroad Adjustment Board, id. § 153, a National Mediation Board, id. §§ 154-155, and a system of arbitration, id. §§ 157-159. The statute gives special attention to changes in rates of pay, rules, and working conditions. It provides that employers give employees the opportunity for negotiation and mediation before implementing such changes. Id. § 156; see also id. § 152, Seventh duty. The Railway Labor Act thus stands as an important structure for maintaining labor peace and fairness.

The Interstate Commerce Act labor protection section, 49 U.S.C. § 11347, affords employees substantial protection from the effects of mergers and consolidations. Such labor protection conditions have a long history. See New York Dock Railway v. ICC, 609 F.2d 83, 86-90 (2d Cir. 1979). In its current version the section provides that, in the exercise of its approval authority, "the Interstate Commerce Commission shall require the carrier to provide a fair arrangement at least as protective of the interests of employees who are affected by the transaction as the terms imposed under this section before February 5, 1976 * * *." 49 U.S.C. § 11347 (emphasis added).

ICC has specified the particular conditions that must be observed for this Section 11347 requirement. The conditions for protecting labor in a merger are known as New York Dock conditions, see New York Dock Railway, 360 ICC 60 (1979), aff'd sub nom. New York Dock Railway v. ICC, supra. The conditions for protecting labor in transfers of trackage rights are known as Norfolk & Western conditions, see Norfolk & Western Railway Co., 354 ICC 605 (1978), modified by Mendocino Coast Rail- way, Inc., 360 ICC 653, 664 (1980), aff'd sub nom. Railway Labor Executives' Ass'n v. United States, 675 F.2d 1248 (D.C. Cir. 1982). These conditions include negotiation and mediation for dismissal and displacement of employees, 354 ICC at 610-611, 360 ICC at 85; dismissal and displacement compensation, 354 ICC at 611-612, 360 ICC at 86; and a system of arbitration, 354 ICC at 613, 360 ICC at 87-88. Generally, the conditions provide that "[t]he rates of pay, rules, working conditions and all collective bargaining and other rights, privileges and benefits * * * of railroads' employees under applicable laws and/or existing collective bargaining agreements or otherwise shall be preserved unless changed by future collective bargaining agreements or applicable statutes." 354 ICC at 610, 360 ICC at 84. ICC has thus established conditions for discharging its statutory responsibility to protect labor benefits in the midst of consolidations.

In short, ICC has authority to approve certain transactions, even to the extent of exempting the transactions from other laws. At the same time, the Railway Labor Act structures rail labor relations, and the Interstate Commerce Act's labor protection section gives rail employees a measure of protection from the effects of rail transactions.

B. The Current Dispute

This dispute has three important stages: (1) ICC's consolidation approval in 1982; (2) the post-approval conflict over crew selection; and (3) the two ICC decisions in 1983.

1. ICC approval for the consolidation. In 1982 UP and MP applied to ICC for approval of a consolidation under ICC's exclusive authority.¹ Several railroads and several unions (including the petitioners) objected to the proposed consolidation. On October 20, 1982 ICC approved the consolidation, but it also approved the application of two railroads for "trackage rights" ² over specified MP routes to ameliorate possible anticompetitive effects. D&RGW received trackage rights for one route (Pueblo, Colorado to Kansas City, Missouri), and MKT received trackage rights for several other routes. See Union Pacific-Control-Missouri Pacific, 366 ICC 459 (1982), affirmed in part and remanded in part sub nom. Southern Pacific Transportation Co. v. ICC, 736 F.2d 708 (D.C. Cir. 1984) (per curiam), cert. denied, 53 USLW 3597 (Feb. 19, 1985). These are the four railroads who are intervening in support of the ICC decisions—the two who received ICC approval of their consolidation (UP and MP) and the two who received trackage rights for MP routes as conditions of that approval (D&RGW and MKT).

In their applications for trackage rights D&RGW and MKT both commented on crew selection. D&RGW specified that it could, at its option, use its own crews when it used the newly granted trackage rights, Finance Docket No. 30,000 (Sub-No. 18) (DRGW-8) (cited in ICC Decision of October 25, 1983, Joint Appendix (JA) 164); MKT specified that it would use its own crews, Finance Docket No. 30,000 (Sub-No. 25) (MKT-25) (cited in ICC Decision of October 25, 1983, JA 164).

In granting the trackage rights ICC did not mention crew selection. The Commission primarily addressed the need for the trackage rights to prevent possible anticompetitive effects from the consolidation. 366 ICC at 566-568, 572-578. Indeed, the Commission denied part of MKT's application for trackage rights because it did not agree that these trackage rights were needed to promote competition. Id. at 570-572. Notably, ICC emphasized that its general trackage rights approval was subject to the Norfolk & Western conditions that protect workers' rights in trackage rights situations. 366 ICC at 654; id. at 621-622. This statement was ICC's only reference to labor arrangements in the use of trackage rights.

2. The crew assignment controversy. After the consolidation became effective, the railroads began performing their approved trackage rights operations. D&RGW temporarily used MP crews on the MP routes, but claimed that it would soon use its own crews. Exhibit A to BLE's Petition for Clarification of ICC's October 20, 1982 decision, JA 6. MKT, meanwhile, began using its own crews. UTU's Petition for Reconsideration of ICC's denial of BLE's Petition for Clarification at 3, JA 74. The unions objected. They claimed that the unions representing MP employees had an established right to a role in crew assignment and that the railroads were changing that condition without consulting them. Both D&RGW and MKT, however, claimed that the ICC approval of their applications gave them a right to use their own crews and that ICC's exemption authority immunized this right from later legal challenge. MP's Reply to BLE's Petition for Clarification at 11, JA 24; UTU's Petition for Reconsideration at 3-4, JA 74-75.

D&RGW also made an additional argument. The Atchison, Topeka, & Santa Fe Railway Company had challenged D&RGW's temporary use of MP crews in the trackage rights as anticompetitive and impermissible. On November 24, 1982 and January 18, 1983 ICC issued decisions rejecting the challenge and upholding D&RGW's plans, including the preliminary decision to use existing MP crews. The Commission noted that D&RGW had the choice of using its own crews; the Commission did not mention any lurking labor relations issues. ICC Decision, November 24, 1982, at 3 (D&RGW brief, Appendix B); ICC Decision, January 18, 1983, at 3 (id., Appendix C). In response to the unions' challenge, D&RGW claimed that these ICC decisions settled the validity of its crew selection plans. Reply of D&RGW to BLE's Petition for Clarification, JA 9-10.

Initially, the two unions responded to the railroads' position on crew selection in different ways. The United Transportation Union threatened to strike over the crew assignment issue. MP sought an injunction preventing the threatened strike. On March 1, 1984 the District Court for the Eastern District of Missouri issued such an injunction. Missouri Pacific R. Co. v. United Transportation Union, 580 F.Supp. 1490 (E.D. Mo. 1984). An appeal from that injunction is pending.

The Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers took a different tack. On April 4, 1983 it filed a petition with the Commission and requested clarification that the consolidation approval did not alter previous labor arrangements, particularly with respect to crew selection. BLE claimed that the normal Railway Labor Act and Interstate Commerce Act labor protection conditions (§ 11347) should apply. BLE's Petition for Clarification, JA 2-4. After ICC rejected BLE's interpretation in a May 18, 1983 decision, UTE joined BLE in a May 31 petition requesting reconsideration. On October 25, 1983 the Commission elaborated on its earlier decision and continued to reject the union's contentions.

3. The ICC decisions. In its May 18 decision refusing BLE's request, ICC maintained that it had already decided the issue of crew selection. The Commission claimed that it had exempted the crew selection provisions, which it had not mentioned in its decision, from all legal obstacles because those provisions were in the trackage rights applications. "Inasmuch as DRGW and MKT proposed in their applications that the operations would be performed with their own crews, our approval of the applications authorizes such operations. * * * We have broad authority to impose conditions on consolidation and our jurisdiction is plenary. Therefore, we properly authorized performance of trackage rights tenants using their own crews." ICC Decision of May 18, 1983 at 4-5, JA 36-37. ICC did not specifically address the Railway Labor Act and Section 11347 arguments. Thus in its May decision ICC implied that it had immunized the crew selection prerogatives from legal obstacles by dint of having approved the trackage applications.

In its October decision the Commission again denied the unions' request. It rejected the notion that it had to provide some basis for concluding that waiver of the Railway Labor Act was necessary to the transaction. "The terms of section 11341 immunizing an approved transaction from any other laws are self-executing and there is no need for us expressly to order or to declare that a carrier is specifically relieved from certain restraints." ICC Decision of October 25, 1983 at 7, JA 163. The Commission similarly rejected the claim that Section 11347 rights were being violated. "To the extent that existing working conditions and collective bargaining agreements conflict with a transaction which we have approved, those conditions and agreements must give way to the implementation of the transaction. The labor conditions imposed under section 11347 preserve conditions and agreements in the context of the authorized transactions." Id. at 6, JA 162. The Commission thus continued to maintain that it had immunized the crew selection from all subsequent legal obstacles, and it continued to offer no analysis of the necessity of this immunity for completion of the transaction.

The unions filed petitions to this court. They claim that ICC exceeded its authority by unjustifiably waiving the Railway Labor Act and the Interstate Commerce Act labor protection conditions.

II. THRESHOLD ISSUES

Before reaching the statutory issues, we must consider two threshold issues: timeliness and issue preclusion.

A. Timeliness

ICC and the four intervening railroads argue that the unions are barred because their appeal is not timely. We disagree.

The timeliness dispute turns on the interpretation to be given various Commission actions. The jurisdictional statute permits judicial review if an appeal of a final order is filed within 60 days. 28 U.S.C. § 2344 (1982). The railroads and ICC contend that ICC's final order on crew selection prerogatives issued on October 20, 1982 (the decision giving general approval for the UP/MP consolidation, subject to the grant of trackage rights to D&RGW and MKT). They argue that the unions' appeals for clarification in April 1983 (resulting in the May 1983 decision) and May 1983 (resulting in the October 1983 decision) are entitled to no weight because those ICC decisions were merely procedural refusals to reopen a matter decided in the October 1982 order.

The railroads and ICC rely heavily on Nat'l Bank of Davis v. Office of Comptroller of Currency, 725 F.2d 1390 (D.C. Cir. 1984) (per curiam). In that case the court ruled that a petition for review was not timely when petitioner took no action during the statutory time period of 30 days, asked the agency to reconsider two months after the decision, and sought to invoke the court's jurisdiction by filing a petition for judicial review within 30 days after the agency denied the petition for reconsideration. The railroads and ICC argue that, similarly, in the case on appeal, the unions seek to make their petition timely by dating the time period for judicial review only from the procedural refusal to reopen a previous proceeding.

Their reliance on Davis is misplaced. As this court observed some time ago in Investment Company Institute v. Board of Gov. of FRS, 551 F.2d 1270, 1281-1282 (D.C. Cir. 1977), and very recently in Eagle-Picher Industries, Inc. v. EPA, — F.2d —, — (D.C. Cir. No. 83-2259, decided April 16, 1985) (slip op. of Edwards, J.

at 13-19), time limits on review may, in exceptional circumstances, be "excused" when an issue is not ripe for review during the statutory period. As we emphasized in Eagle-Picher, petitioners generally are obliged to seek judicial determination of the ripeness of their claims during the statutory period. "In general, we will refuse to hypothesize whether, in retrospect, a claim would have been deemed ripe for review had it been brought during the statutory period, in order to save an untimely claim."

— F.2d at —, slip op. at 6. However, we specifically noted that "[e]xceptions occasionally may be justified in the light of changed circumstances giving rise to a new cause of action beyond the statutory period for review; compelling case precedent that makes it clear beyond doubt that the claim was not ripe during the statutory period; or clear evidence that a failure to consider a petitioner's claims would work a manifest injustice." Id.

The instant case clearly presents a situation in which the petitioners' claim ripened after the expiration of the statutory period due to changed circumstances resulting from a misleading statement of position by ICC. The petitioners had no notice of their present claim until after ICC denied their petition for clarification and reconsideration thereof. In its initial decision, the ICC specifically said that the statutory labor protection conditions would apply and, thus, it would have been premature for the unions to have claimed that the conditions were being violated. The Commission and the railroads argue that the trackage applications specifically noted that D&RCW might, and MKT would, use their own crews, and thus there was no ripeness problem. However, those applications were bounded by ICC's general pronouncement that the labor protection conditions would not be violated. As soon as it became apparent that MKT intended to use its own crews, the unions petitioned ICC for clarification of the application of the labor protection conditions. The issue did not become ripe for judicial review until the Commission had specified that crew selection was exempt from all otherwise applicable legal requirements.³

Nor can it be claimed that the petition should be barred because it was not filed within 60 days after the May decision. For the Commission then undertook extensive review and issued a lengthy opinion in October. If the motion for reconsideration is filed within the statutorily prescribed review period, the time limitation tolls until the agency issues its final decision on the motion for reconsideration, see Outland v. CAB, 284 F.2d 224 (D.C. Cir. 1960); Davis, supra, 735 F.2d at 1391 n.5, and it is tolled while the agency is giving full consideration to the issues presented for judicial review, see Nat'l Insulation Transportation Committee v. ICC, 683 F.2d 533, 543 n.17 (D.C. Cir. 1982).

The railroads and the Commission also claim that the petition should be barred as untimely because ICC clarified its policy on crew assignment in decisions issued on November 24, 1982 and January 18, 1983. At that time D&RGW had not exercised its option to use its own crews; the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railway was protesting its use of MP crews as anticompetitive. In its decisions ICC noted that D&RGW had the option of using its own crews. The argument that this statement should have put the unions on notice is unconvincing: nothing suggested that ICC had changed its view that the general labor protection conditions would apply in full force. The dispute is not over whether the railroads could use their own crews; it is whether they could use their own crews subject to the requirements of the labor protection conditions. Before May 1983 the Commission never suggested that D&RGW and MKT could use their own crews without observing the basic labor protection conditions. And before the railroads refused to negotiate in early 1983 the unions had no reason to appeal to the Commission for clarification. Thus the November 1982 and January 1983 decisions should not stand as a bar: although those decisions suggested that the railroads could use their own crews, ICC did not suggest that they could do so without observing the basic labor protection conditions.

Finally, pointing to the principle that parties should raise their objections in administrative proceedings, United States v. L. A. Tucker Truck Lines, 344 U.S. 33 (1952), the railroads and ICC claim that the unions should have raised their objection in the October 1982 proceeding. However, in the administrative proceedings the unions did argue for vigorous labor protections, 366 ICC at 621-622. As discussed, it was not until the May decision that the unions should have realized that the labor protection conditions would not be fully applicable to crew selection.

B. Issue Preclusion

MKT raises an additional threshold objection. It claims that the crew selection issues were decided in the opinion accompanying the Missouri District Court's injunction prohibiting UTU from striking, see Missouri Pacific R. Co. v. United Transportation Union, supra, 580 F. Supp. 1490, appeal pending, and that issue preclusion prevents this court from reaching the issues. This argument is frivolous. Despite broad dicta, the District Court recognized that it had no power to consider the validity of ICC orders. See id. at 1502 ("The United States Courts of Appeals are vested with exclusive jurisdiction to determine the validity of orders of the ICC."). Thus there can be no preclusive effects on this court's review of the validity of the ICC order. See 18 C. WRIGHT, A. MILLER & E. COOPER, FEDERAL PRACTICE AND PROCEDURE § 4420 (1981) ("The fundamental rationale of issue preclusion dictates the clearly settled requirement that it be limited to matters that have been actually decided.").

We thus reject the threshold objections and turn to the merits of the unions' contentions.

III. STATUTORY ISSUES

The unions raise two statutory arguments: (1) ICC offered no inkling of a justification for the view that waiving the Railway Labor Act with respect to crew assignment was necessary to effectuate the transaction, and (2) the Interstate Commerce Act labor protection conditions (49 U.S.C. § 11347) may not be waived because the labor protection section specifically qualifies ICC's consolidation approval authority (49 U.S.C. § 11341). We find the first argument decisive.

The unions claim that ICC has wholly failed to justify the necessity for waiving the Railway Labor Act's applicability to the crew selection issue. The Commission claims that no such justification is necessary.

Although an agency receives deference in interpreting its organic statute, the agency's authority is not unbounded. Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco & Firearms v. FLRA, — U.S. —, — & n.8, 104 S.Ct. 439, 444 & n.8 (1983). In reviewing an agency's interpretation we must consider whether it is within the delegation to the agency envisioned by Congress. State of Montana v. Clark, 749 F.2d 740, 744-747 (D.C. Cir. 1984). Our analysis must begin with the language of Congress. "If the intent of Congress is clear, that is the end of the matter; for the court, as well as the agency, must give effect to the unambiguously expressed intent of Congress." Chevron, U.S.A., Inc. v. Natural Resources Defense Council, Inc., — U.S. —, —, 104 S.Ct. 2778, 2782 (1984).

The statutory language dictates that the Commission's exemption authority applies only "as necessary" to allow transactions to occur. 49 U.S.C. § 11341(a). Congress has given ICC broad powers to immunize transactions from later legal obstacles, but this delegation by Congress is explicitly qualified by a necessity component. The statute thus requires that the exemption authority operate according to necessity, not according to whim or caprice.

This statutory limit on the Commission's authority creates certain responsibilities for ICC. In exercising its waiver authority ICC must do more than shake a wand to make a law go away. It must supply a reasoned basis for that exercise of its statutory authority.⁴

This necessity component of ICC's waiver authority has not frequently arisen in the case law. In part this is because, in many of the ICC waiver authority cases, the necessity for the waiver is clear; the battle is fought over whether the waiver and transaction are in the public interest. See, e.g., United States v. ICC, supra, 396 U.S. 491. However, ample precedent supports the view that the Commission must supply some basis for a necessity determination before the exemption authority applies. In one line of cases the Supreme Court has assumed that ICC may waive state laws only if those state laws pose an obstacle to the transaction. See Callaway v. Benton, 336 U.S. 132, 140-141 (1949) (waiver authority applies to "state laws interposing obstacles in the path of otherwise lawful plans of reorganization"); Seaboard Air Line R. Co. v. Daniel, 333 U.S. 118, 126 (1948); Texas v. United States, 292 U.S. 522, 534-535 (1934).⁵ Furthermore, the Supreme Court has stressed that the words of ICC's approval authority section must be carefully scrutinized to ensure that ICC does not exceed its statutory powers, County of Marin v. United States, 356 U.S. 412 (1958), and that ICC's approval authority, though broad, is ultimately reviewable as an exercise of reasoned decisionmaking. See United States v. ICC, supra; Seaboard Air Line R. Co. v. United States, 382 U.S. 154 (1965); Minneapolis & St. Louis R. Co. v. United States, 361 U.S. 173 (1959); McLean Trucking Co. v. United States, 321 U.S. 67 (1944).

Other courts have also emphasized that there must be a basis in the record for the conclusion that the statutory waiver is necessary to the transaction. In City of Palestine, Texas v. United States, 559 F.2d 408 (5th Cir. 1977), cert. denied, 435 U.S. 950 (1978), the Fifth Circuit provided an extensive analysis of this necessity problem. In vacating ICC's determination that it had waived certain contractual obligations the court stressed: "The ICC exceeds the scope of its authority when it voids contracts that are not germane to the success of the approved * * * transaction. In its grant of approval authority, Congress did not issue the ICC a hunting license for state laws and contracts that limit a railroad's efficiency unless those laws or contracts interfered with carrying out an approved merger." Id. at 414 (emphasis added). Similarly, in an earlier case the Fifth Circuit noted that ICC approval of a carrier's plans did not automatically remove the requirements of the Railway Labor Act and the Norris-LaGuardia Act. Texas & New Orleans R. Co. v. Bhd of Railroad Trainmen, 307 F.2d 151 (5th Cir. 1962), cert. denied, 371 U.S. 952 (1963). See also Interstate Investors, Inc. v. Transcontinental Bus System, Inc., 310 F.Supp. 1053, 1068 (S.D. N.Y. 1970) (court must determine whether waiver of anti-trust laws is "necessary" to completion of transaction).⁶

With these principles in mind, the current dispute comes clearly into focus. ICC claims that the Railway Labor Act was a "law" appropriately waived in the exercise of its exclusive authority. ICC's analysis of the necessity for waiving the Railway Labor Act, however, is virtually nonexistent, both in the 1982 decision and in the 1983 decisions. In the 1982 decision ICC never offered a word about waiving the Railway Labor Act with respect to the crew assignment in the trackage rights, much less the necessity for doing so. As noted, it merely approved the trackage applications and specified that the labor protection conditions applied in full. In the 1983 decisions ICC continued to give no necessity justification for the waiver of the Railway Labor Act. It claimed that "[t]he terms of section 11341 immunizing an approved transaction from any other laws are self-executing and there is no need for us expressly to order or to declare that a carrier is specifically relieved from certain restraints." ICC Decision of October 25, 1983, JA 163. In its proceedings, then, the Commission did not give a shred of reasoning to support its view that completion of the transactions required shielding crew selection from the Railway Labor Act.⁷

⁶ ICC relies on Bhd of Locomotive Engineers v. Chicago & Northwestern R. Co., 314 F.2d 424 (8th Cir.), cert. denied, 375 U.S. 819 (1963), to support its position. In that case the Eighth Circuit affirmed an ICC order approving a railroad-union labor agreement and specified that the Railway Labor Act would not apply. The government claims that C&NW stands for the proposition that the immunity is automatic and requires no finding of necessity. However, C&NW fails to carry the day for several reasons. First, C&NW itself recognized that immunity attached only to obstacles that would frustrate fruition of the merger. Id. at 432. Second, C&NW distinguished, but did not disagree with, Texas & New Orleans R. Co. v. Bhd of Railroad Trainmen, 307 F.2d 151 (5th Cir. 1962), cert. denied, 371 U.S. 952 (1963). 314 F.2d at 433. And third, C&NW was explicitly limited to its facts. Id. at 434. C&NW did say that no statement of necessity was required. Id. at 432. To the extent that C&NW may be read to say that ICC need supply no basis for the necessity determination, we find that interpretation ill-conceived and reject it.

ICC's complete failure to justify the necessity for waiving the Railway Labor Act respecting crew selection is especially conspicuous in light of evidence suggesting that the issue would not interfere with the trackage rights. First, the Commission specifically left the question of trackage compensation open to later negotiation between the railroads, 366 ICC at 589-590; it never suggested why the question of crew selection was somehow so much more necessary to fruition of the transaction that normal Railway Labor Act procedures could not apply to the issue of crew selection. Second, ICC noted that MKT might find it necessary to use more crews than it suggested in its application, 366 ICC at 569-570; again, the Commission never suggested why the question of crew selection was so much more necessary to fruition of the transaction. On both of these issues, then, the Commission expressed a willingness to leave subsidiary trackage issues to later determination. Finally, the Denver & Rio Grande operated for some months with existing Missouri Pacific crews, and there has been no suggestion that the trackage rights were somehow frustrated as a result.⁸

⁷ ICC points to its October decision statement that "[t]he approval confers self-executing immunity on all material terms of the agreement from all other law to the extent necessary to permit implementation of the agreement," ICC Decision of Oct. 25, 1983 at 15, JA 171. It then claims that this reference to "material terms" provides a sufficient basis for immunity because crew selection was a "material term" of the trackage rights transaction. However, merely stating in totally conclusory terms that something is a "material term" is inadequate to provide the basis for the conclusion that waiver is necessary to fruition of the transaction, as § 11341(a) requires. We do not, as the dissent suggests, "attempt[] to disregard" this statement. Dissent at 19. Rather, we search in vain for the articulated, rational explanation of this purported finding that elementary principles of reasoned decisionmaking clearly demand. Burlington Truck Lines, Inc. v. United States, 371 U.S. 156, 168 (1962).

In short, ICC has given no justification for a view that waiver of the Railway Labor Act is necessary to effectuate the transactions at issue. Indeed, the evidence in the record strongly suggests the contrary conclusion. The Commission therefore exceeded its authority when it claimed to have waived the Railway Labor Act regarding crew selection.

In view of this disposition, it is unnecessary to reach the second statutory issue—whether ICC may ever waive the labor protection condition section (§ 11347) through the exercise of the exemption authority (§ 11341(a)).

That issue turns on whether Section 11347 is viewed as a "law" that may be appropriately waived, or as a specific qualification on the exemption authority itself. We note only that the Commission has completely failed to show any conflict between these two sections of the Interstate Commerce Act, which we assume were meant to be read in concert rather than in conflict, and we need not comment on the unlikely event that the two sections may pose a genuine conflict in some later case.⁹

We thus vacate the 1983 orders and leave the parties to their Railway Labor Act remedies. In doing so we intimate no view on the merits of the unions' claims about their underlying right to a role in crew selection. The Railway Labor Act is designed to resolve such issues, and we leave the parties to the mechanism created by Congress.¹⁰

So ordered.

⁹ The unions have argued that the Railway Labor Act and § 11347 rights are largely coextensive in this case, and we thus view the Railway Labor Act argument as dispositive. To the extent that there is a meaningful difference between the Railway Labor Act and § 11347 protections, the unions have not argued it, and we need not address the issue. In any event, we note that our decision vacates the ICC decisions in their entirety.

MACKINNON, Senior Circuit Judge (dissenting): This case involves the consolidation of the Union Pacific Railroad Company ("UP"), the Missouri Pacific Railroad Company ("Missouri Pacific"), and the Western Pacific Railroad Company ("WP"), thus forming one of the nation's largest railroads. In an October 20, 1982 decision, the ICC granted specified trackage rights, over two sections of the Missouri-Pacific lines, to two railroads that would be harmed by the consolidation, the Missouri-Kansas-Texas Railroad Company ("Katy") and the Denver and Rio Grande Western Railroad Company ("Rio Grande"). The Commission authorized these two railroads to use their own crews to operate their own trains while exercising such trackage rights. My colleagues rule that the Commission has failed to find that it was "necessary" to the approval of the trackage rights applications and the underlying Union Pacific-Missouri Pacific-Western Pacific consolidation to waive any applicable protective labor conditions. In my view, the majority has ignored the clear import of the record and, in a decision that pays lip service to our prescribed standard of review, substituted its judgment for that of the ICC. I therefore respectfully dissent.

I.

The majority holds first that the claims of the petitioning unions are not barred for being untimely because the October 20, 1982 ICC decision was not final and thus did not make the issue of crew selection ripe for review. I cannot agree with the majority's analysis.

This case began on September 15, 1980, when the UP, the Missouri Pacific, and the WP filed jointly for approval to consolidate. After the application was made public, 45 Fed. Reg. 68484 (1980), various parties entered the fray either to support or oppose the application. On January 13, 1981, the Katy and the Rio Grande opposed the consolidation and filed separate applications seeking protective trackage rights and other compensatory rights they alleged were necessary in order both to ameliorate the anticompetitive harms of the proposed consolidations and to protect them from revenue losses necessary to continue essential services.

The Katy sought trackage rights to operate over Missouri Pacific's tracks between Kansas City, Kansas, and Omaha, Nebraska, a distance of approximately 200 miles. The proposed operating agreement, as submitted to the ICC for approval, specified the operating conditions for the joint trackage rights and specifically stated:

MKT [Katy], with its own employees, and at its sole cost and expense, shall operate its engines, cars and trains on and along Joint Track.

Finance Doc. No. 30,000 (Sub-No. 25) 1, Exh. No. 2 at 5 (emphasis added). The Rio Grande was harmed by the merger both at the Utah and the Pueblo, Colorado gateways. It sought joint trackage rights to operate over Missouri Pacific's tracks between Pueblo, Colorado, and Kansas City, Missouri, a distance of 619 miles. Its trackage rights application submitted for ICC approval stated:

Rio Grande may, at its option, elect to employ its own crews for the movement of its trains, locomotives and cars to points on or over the Joint Track.

Id. (Sub- No. 18), Rio Grande Proposed Agreement § 6 (c) (3) (emphasis added). Thus, both railroads expressly requested ICC authority to use their own crews while operating their own "trains, locomotives and cars" over joint trackage with the Missouri Pacific.

On February 20, 1981, the Katy and the Rio Grande filed verified statements with the ICC in support of their applications for joint trackage rights. These statements indicated further that if the trackage rights were granted, the railroads would use their own crews. Verified Statements of Adolf Nance and Harold Hacker, quoted in J.A. at 165. In ruling on the applications, the implicit issue for the ICC was the degree of anticompetitive harm to which the Katy and Rio Grande would be subjected and accordingly what amount of compensatory rights would be necessary to protect the liability of the applicant railroads and to guarantee that they would furnish the necessary competition to the merged railroads. The petitioning unions, the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers ("Engineers" or "union") and the United Transportation Union ("UTU" or "union"), participated in the ICC proceedings and submitted evidence in opposition to the joint trackage rights applications. Hearings proceeded for eleven months, ending in January, 1982. There is no indication, however, that petitioners ever contended that UP or Missouri Pacific employees had a right to participate in the crew selection decision.

On October 20, 1982, the ICC approved the consolidation of the UP, the Missouri Pacific, and the Western Pacific and made the consolidation subject to the usual labor protective conditions set forth in New York Dock Ry.—Control—Brooklyn Eastern Dist. Terminal, 360 I.C.C. 60 (1979). As part of the consolidation, while disapproving other requested compensatory conditions, the ICC specifically approved the applications of the Katy and the Rio Grande for the trackage rights described above, subject to the labor protection conditions specified in Norfolk & Western Ry. Co.—Trackage Rights—Burlington Northern, Inc., 354 I.C.C. 605 (1978), as modified by Mendocino Coast Ry., Inc.—Lease and Operate, 360 I.C.C. 653, 665 (1980). Union Pacific Corp., Pacific Rail System, Inc., and Union Pacific R.R. Co.—Control—Missouri Pacific Corp. and Missouri Pacific R.R. Co., 366 I.C.C. 459, 654 (1982). Though these labor protections were held to be applicable in general, I think it is clear that they were to be inapplicable to the crew selection issue since the crew selection provisions constituted part of the trackage rights applications approved by the final order of the Commission. Moreover, unlike other trackage rights-related requests by the Katy and Rio Grande which the Commission denied, see Majority Opinion at 20-21, there was no express denial of the crew selection requests. Therefore, the labor unions were on notice that the ICC had authorized the Katy and the Rio Grande to use their own crews in the operation of their own trains in the exercise of their joint trackage rights.

It was not until April 4, 1983, approximately five and one-half months after the ICC's decision approving the consolidation, that the Engineers filed a petition with the ICC seeking clarification of the October 20, 1982 decision. The ICC denied the Engineer's petition on the procedural grounds that crew selection had been an issue in the consolidation proceedings, that petitioners introduced no new evidence or arguments setting forth any issue in need of clarification, and that the issues involved had been decided in the Commission's October 20, 1982 decision. Following this denial, the UTU joined the Engineers in moving for reconsideration of the denial of the motion for clarification.

Time deadlines for requesting review of agency decisions are jurisdictional and cannot be enlarged by a reviewing court. National Resources Defense Council v. NRC, 666 F.2d 595, 602 (D.C. Cir. 1981); Microwave Communications, Inc. v. FCC, 515 F.2d 385, 388-89 (D.C. Cir. 1974). The Hobbs Act prescribes that judicial review must be sought within 60 days of a final order. 28 U.S.C. § 2344 (1982). An action of the Commission is final on the date on which it is served, and exhaustion of further administrative remedies is not required. 49 U.S.C. § 10327(i) (Supp. V 1981). The Commission's decision here was served on October 20, 1982. In this case, then, the statutory time period expired December 20, 1982. No judicial review was sought before that date.

We have also recognized that a party who had the opportunity to participate in the underlying proceedings is a party "aggrieved" under 28 U.S.C. § 2344. See Simmons v. ICC, 716 F.2d 40, 42 (D.C. Cir. 1983). Yet I find no indication in the record or briefs that the Engineers or the UTU ever objected to the proposed crew provisions on the grounds that labor protections would be violated by granting them. Whatever caused petitioners not to seek timely review, it was not any ambiguity in the ICC decision of October 20, 1982. Petitioners plainly slept on whatever rights that they contend they possessed.

Determined to reach the contentions raised by this petition, however, my colleagues accept the labor unions' argument that the crew selection issue was not ripe for review when the ICC served its decision. Petitioners contend that the issue was not ripe because the ICC's general pronouncement that the New York Dock and Norfolk labor protection provisions would apply somehow nullified the express statements in the applications regarding crew selection. The unions claim that they petitioned for clarification of the October 1982 decision as soon as it became apparent that the railroads intended to use their own crews, i.e., when the railroads began to file their trackage rights agreements with the ICC. Brief of BLE at 8-9.¹ This claim should not be accepted as extending the time to appeal. The railroads at that time were doing nothing more than exercising the rights clearly granted them by the October 20, 1982 decision. The unions had been on notice since the day the applications for trackage rights were filed on January 13, 1981, that the railroads intended to use their own crews to operate their own trains if their applications for trackage rights were approved. The ICC's October 1982 decision approved those applications and authorized the use of the applicant's own crews in the operation of their own trains.

Moreover, I find the majority's analysis particularly difficult to swallow in light of Eagle-Picher Industries, Inc. v. EPA, No. 83-2259 slip op. (D.C. Cir. Apr. 16,

1985) (Opinion by Edwards, J.). In Eagle-Picher this court emphasized that "[a]s a general proposition . . . if there is any doubt about the ripeness of a claim, petitioners must bring their challenge in a timely fashion or risk being barred." Id. at 17. "Consequently," this court concluded, except where events occur or information becomes available after the statutory review period expires that essentially creates a challenge that did not previously exist [emphasis added], or where a petitioner's claim is, under our precedents, indisputably not ripe until the agency takes further action, we will be very reluctant, in order to save a late petitioner from the strictures of a timeliness requirement, to engage in a retrospective determination of whether we would have held the claim ripe had it been brought on time.

Id. at 17-18. Under the Eagle-Picher analysis, at best petitioners must be said to have entertained "some" doubt about the ripeness of their claims. At worst, later occurrences did not create a challenge "that did not previously exist," nor were petitioners' claims "indisputably not ripe."

By this appeal petitioners plainly attempt to convert a petition to reconsider the denial of a motion for clarification into a challenge of a final decision by the ICC that granted the Katy and the Rio Grande the right to crew their own trains over joint trackage with the Missouri Pacific. Because the motion to clarify was denied on procedural grounds, the proper inquiry is whether the Commission's decision on the motion to reconsider the denial of the motion to clarify is a decision on the merits. A decision on the merits of the motion for reconsideration could extend the time period for seeking appellate review. Bowman v. Loperena, 311 U.S. 262 (1940). The majority, however, never reaches this question.

I thus disagree with the conclusion that the October 20, 1982 decision was not ripe for review. I am also disturbed by the ostensible ease by which the panel finds jurisdiction. Apparently, this court is not "fastidious about the impropriety of reaching merits issues without first establishing jurisdiction." Beattie v. United States, No. 84-5413 slip op. at 44 (D.C. Cir. Dec. 31, 1984) (Scalia, J., dissenting, opinion filed Feb. 26, 1985). Compare Eagle-Picher, supra, at 12 ("[p]roffered excuses for late filing are carefully scrutinized"). In my view, the very substantial delay of petitioners should not be so rewarded. My only solace lies in the hope that the majority's retrospective ripeness analysis is motivated by the fact that the present proceedings were conducted without the benefit of Eagle-Picher.

II.

Even assuming a finding of jurisdiction in this case is correct, the majority has clearly erred in its decision on the merits. It decides that because the ICC did not make an express finding that the waiver of any labor protections applicable to the crew selection provisions in the trackage rights applications was "necessary" to approval of the transaction, it exceeded its authority under the Interstate Commerce Act, 49 U.S.C. § 11341(a) (Supp. IV 1981), in excepting those provisions from any labor protections. Without explanation, though, the majority vacates the ICC's decision on crew selection and relegates that issue to arbitration under the Railway Labor Act, 45 U.S.C. § 151 et seq.

Why the lack of an express "necessity" finding in and of itself requires the court to vacate the ICC's approval regarding crew selection on this record is puzzling. The whole basis for granting the trackage rights, which included the crew selection provisions, was the implicit conclusion that the granting of such rights was necessary to the approval of the merger. Presumably, the majority senses a conflict between the approved crew selection provision and the unions' asserted rights. The majority, however, if it knows, does not indicate what the parameters of the unions' claimed rights might be and similarly fails to state where, if anywhere, these rights and applicable labor protections intersect. For all the majority indicates, they may not conflict at all. Indeed, this was the conclusion reached by the ICC (J.A. 163-64). Obviously, if there is no conflict, there is no need to vacate the Commission's decision on crew selection. Yet, in the absence of any evidence supporting the unions' claims, and in the face of justifications for the ICC's decision, the majority, without further inquiry, leap frogs the Commission's findings and completely nullifies the authority of the ICC to provide for crew selection in trackage rights agreements imposed to ensure that consolidations are in the public interest. The majority's reasons for doing so are inexplicable.

The arguments of the Engineers and the UTU, and the majority decision itself, are based on the fundamental assertion by the unions that they enjoy by custom and by collectively-bargained agreements a right to crew all trains passing over the Missouri Pacific's tracks. This is tantamount to a declaration that the unions, in effect, have a proprietary interest in the tracks of their employer—an astonishing contention. Also implicit in the unions' assertion is the claim that the unionized employees of the consolidated railroads (the Missouri Pacific, UP, and WP) have a colorable right to bargain with the Katy and the Rio Grande over who will crew the trains of the latter railroads. There is no basis in law or fact for such an absurd conclusion. It is basic contract law that one cannot be bound by agreements between third parties. Even assuming such rights might exist, the ICC found that "the record contains no evidence to support the contention of UTU and BLE that UP-MP employees have rights under collective bargaining agreements to participate in the crew selection process" of foreign railroads operating under trackage rights (J.A. 168). However, the majority today rules that the mere pleading of such rights, without more, trumps the authority vested in the ICC to make crew selection decisions regarding trackage rights.

In my opinion the court errs partly because it confuses the issue in this case. It states that "[t]he dispute is not over whether the railroads could use their own crews; [the dispute] . . . is whether they could use their own crews subject to the requirements of the [statutory] labor protection conditions." Maj. Op. at 14. The ICC's October 20, 1982 decision stated that the labor protections would apply to the transaction. As previously explained, the ICC saw no apparent conflict between the protective labor conditions and its decision to permit crew selection by the railroads who operate the trains. But in its 1983 decisions, in an effort to meet the unions' scattered arguments, the Commission ruled in the alternative that the crew selection process was exempt from any labor protection conditions that might apply. In my view the issue in this case, assuming that the applicable labor provisions in the Act conflict with the proposed ICC action, is merely whether the ICC had the authority to so exempt the crew selection process from applicable labor protection conditions, and if so, whether it properly exercised that authority. In all other respects, the statutory labor protections still apply.²

² See Brotherhood of Maintenance of Way Employees v. ICC, 698 F.2d 315, 317 n.6 (7th Cir. 1983) ("The adoption of standard conditions, routinely imposed, often results in incorporation of superfluous provisions having no application to the particular case under consideration.").

Because the majority did not reach the issue of whether the labor protections under 49 U.S.C. § 11347 can be exempted through § 11341(a)'s exemption power, I too express no view on that issue. However, it seems to me that in this case where the trackage rights applications were approved specifically to offset the anti-

The Interstate Commerce Act in section 11341(a) provides:

The authority of the Interstate Commerce Commission under this subchapter is exclusive. . . . A carrier, corporation, or person participating in that transaction is exempt from the antitrust laws and from all other law, including State and municipal law, as necessary to let that person carry out the transaction, hold, maintain, and operate property, and exercise control or franchises acquired through the transaction. . . .

49 U.S.C. § 11341(a) (emphasis added). The authority granted the ICC under this statute is very broad. To the extent necessary to approve a transaction—the merger in this case—the ICC may exempt the carrier involved from "all other law." This is plain language, and there is nothing on which to base any contention that it does not mean exactly what it says, or that the Railway Labor Act, 45 U.S.C. §§ 151 et seq. (1982)³ is not a "law" subject to the exemption authority under § 11341(a).

In Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers v. Chicago & North Western Ry. ("North Western"), 314 F.2d 424 (8th Cir.), cert. denied, 375 U.S. 819 (1963), the court held that § 5(11) of the Interstate Commerce Act (now § 11341(a)) conferred exclusive and plenary jurisdiction upon the ICC to approve mergers and exempt the carrier from all other restraints of federal law, including the Railway Labor Act ("RLA"). Id. at 429, 431-32. In that pre-Staggers Act case, the court affirmed the order of the ICC that approved a stipulation by the carriers competitive harms of the consolidation, the unions' rights under N&W Art. I § 4 exist vis à vis the consolidating railroads and not against either the Katy or the Rio Grande.

that overrode the RLA. The court rejected the union's claim, which is similar to that made here, that the ICC lacked jurisdiction because it failed to find expressly that the provisions of the Railway Labor Act were rendered inoperative. Id. at 432. Rather, the court agreed with the Commission's finding, as expressed in another proceeding, that "[t]he terms of this paragraph are self-executing, and there is no need for this Commission expressly to order or declare that a carrier be relieved from certain restraints." Id. (quoting Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis & Omaha Ry. Lease, 295 I.C.C. 696 (1958)).

In the present case the Commission similarly noted that the provisions of § 11341(a) provide "self-executing immunity on all material terms of the agreement . . . to the extent necessary to . . . implement[] the agreement" (J.A. 171) (emphasis added). Granted, North Western, supra, involved a stipulation by the carriers which required arbitration in a manner similar to that provided by the RLA. The majority, however, refuses to recognize the clear breadth of the ICC's authority expressed in North Western. Rather, it attempts to distinguish the case by noting how similar it is to the present case, see Maj. Op. at 19 n.6, a novel technique that substantially broadens the ability to reach the result desired by the majority.⁴

⁴ City of Palestine, Texas v. United States, 559 F.2d 408 (5th Cir. 1977), cert. denied, 435 U.S. 950 (1978), relied on by the majority, does not support its position. In that case, the ICC was found to have exceeded its authority when it voided an agreement with the city of Palestine to maintain a certain number of employees there, which was "not germane to the success of the approved . . . transaction." Id. at 414 (emphasis added). In the present case, not only does the record support the fact that the crew selection provision was important to ameliorate the anticompetitive aspects of the proposed consolidation, the Commission itself found the provision "material" to and "related to the transportation effects" of the transaction (J.A. 170, 171). Similarly, Texas & New Orleans R.R. v. Board of Railroad Trainmen, 307 F.2d 151 (5th Cir. 1962), cert. denied, 371 U.S. 952 (1963), is not relevant to this case. That

The apparent ease by which the majority arrives at its conclusion is attributable in large part to its mischaracterization of Supreme Court precedent. Through the majority's misreading of these cases, it has manufactured a wholly new and more difficult ICC waiver standard. The majority claims support from "one line of cases" that assertedly permits ICC waiver "only if those state laws pose an obstacle to the transaction." Maj. Op. at 17 (emphasis added). No such "line" exists.

The principal case the majority cites for its contention, Callaway v. Benton, 336 U.S. 132, 140-41 (1949), set forth the majority's quote in dicta. Callaway involved a railroad reorganization under § 77 of the Bankruptcy Act, 11 U.S.C. § 205, and under the "narrow facts" there present (336 U.S. at 150), raised the question whether a bankruptcy court could enjoin a state court suit leading to a determination of the requirements of state law with respect to the sale of the entire assets of the lessor railroad. In its limited two paragraph discussion of § 5(11) of the Interstate Commerce Act (now § 11341(a)), the Court expressly rejected any reliance on that section of the Act and, furthermore, distinguished the Bankruptcy Act from the Interstate Commerce Act. Id. at 139-40 ("[T]hat section [§ 5(11)] relates to voluntary mergers, not to the purchase of a leased line as part of a plan of reorganization.") ("That power [under § 77] flows from a different source than the power over consolidations under the Interstate Commerce Act."). In its only comment relevant to this case, the Court merely reiterated that nothing in its opinion should be read to derogate its prior opinions upholding the ICC's power "to override case involved the union's power to strike under the Norris-LaGuardia Act, 29 U.S.C. §§ 101 et seq., and the court in fact stated that "section [5(11), now § 11341(a),] relieves the carriers of the restraints and limitations of other laws, but it does not, on its face, relieve them from the actions of other parties, i.e., the union's economic threat of a strike." Id. at 156 (emphasis added).

state laws interposing obstacles in the path of otherwise lawful plans of reorganization." Id. at 140-41 (emphasis added) (footnote omitted).

The remaining cases cited by the majority similarly fail to support the proposition for which they are cited. In Seaboard Air Line R. Co. v. Daniel, 333 U.S. 118 (1948), a South Carolina statute forbade the operation of foreign railroads in that state. The ICC approved a transaction and exempted the railroad from the strictures of the state law. The South Carolina Supreme Court held that the ICC lacked power under § 5 to relieve the carrier from the state law requirements. The Court reversed, explaining:

. . . Furthermore, since that case [Texas v. United States, 292 U.S. 522 (1934)] was decided Congress has given additional proof of its purpose to grant adequate power to the Commission to override state laws which may interfere with efficient and economical railroad operation. By § 5(11) of the Interstate Commerce Act, as amended by the Transportation Act of 1940, 54 Stat. 908, 49 U.S.C. § 5(11), Congress granted the Commission "exclusive and plenary" authority in refusing or approving railroad consolidations, mergers, acquisitions, etc. The breadth of this grant of power can be understood only by reference to § 5(2)(b) which authorizes the Commission to condition its approval upon "such terms and conditions and such modifications as it shall find to be just and reasonable." All of this power can be exercised in accordance with what the Commission may find to be "consistent with the public interest." The purchaser of railroad property with Commission approval is authorized by § 5(11) "to own and operate any properties . . . acquired through said transaction without invoking any approval under State authority," and such an approved owner, according to that paragraph, is "relieved from the operation of the antitrust laws and of all other restraints, limitations, and prohibitions of law, Federal, State, or municipal, insofar as may be necessary to enable them to carry into effect the transaction so approved . . . and to hold, maintain, and operate any properties . . . acquired through such transaction."

This language very clearly reposes power in the Commission to exempt railroads under a § 5 proceeding from state laws which bar them from operating in the state or impose conditions upon such operations.

Id. at 125-26 (emphasis added). Thus, the Court did not adopt an "obstacle" standard; rather it articulated the standard as being the "public interest" goal of the statute.

The third case cited by the majority, Texas v. United States, 292 U.S. 522 (1934), concerned the ICC's approval of a transaction that had exempted a railroad from the prescriptions of a Texas statute which required a railroad operating in the state to maintain offices there. The Commission had found that requiring the railroad in question to maintain such offices would entail "unnecessary" and "burdensome" expenditures and waived compliance therewith. Id. at 533. In upholding the ICC the Supreme Court noted:

Title II of the Emergency Railroad Transportation Act, 1933, in amending § 5 of the Interstate Commerce Act, carries its own provision as to immunity from state requirements which would stand in the way of the execution of the policy of the Congress through the Commission's orders.

. . . The scope of the immunity must be measured by the purpose which Congress had in view and had constitutional power to accomplish. As that purpose involved the promotion of economy and efficiency in interstate transportation by the removal of the burdens of excessive expenditure, the removal of such burdens when imposed by state requirements was an essential part of the plan. . . .

Id. at 534. The granting of full trackage rights here is also an essential part of the plan to permit the merger and to compensate—in the public interest—for some of its anticompetitive effects.

Finally, in what can charitably be attributed to oversight, the majority fails to mention in its line of precedent and relegates to a footnote Schwabacher v. United States, 334 U.S. 182 (1948), which contradicts the majority's position by stating that the "public interest" is the controlling consideration.⁵ In Schwabacher, the ICC approved, again under § 5(11), the voluntary merger of three railroads. Intervening dissenting shareholders of one of the merging railroads alleged that the terms of the merger would deprive them of charter rights granted by their company's state of incorporation. The Commission, however, disclaimed jurisdiction to pass on the claims of the shareholders and stated that the railroads were free to settle such controversies "through negotiation and litigation in the courts." Id. at 188. The Supreme Court reversed. It held that the Commission erred in renouncing its authority to determine finally the rights of the dissenting shareholders, and specifically held that . . . no rights alleged to have been granted to dissenting stockholders by state law provision concerning liquidation survive the merger agreement approved by the requisite number of stockholders and approved by the Commission as just and reasonable.

Id. at 201 (emphasis added). The Court reasoned that it would be "inconsistent to allow state law to apply a liquidation basis . . . for continued public service." Id. at 200. Regarding the waiver authority, the Court reaffirmed that "'Congress has long made the maintenance and development of an economical and efficient railroad system a matter of primary national concern. Its legislation must be read with this purpose in mind.'" Id. at 193-94 (quoting Seaboard Air Line R. Co. v. Daniel, 333 U.S. 118, 124-25 (1948)). The Court noted that "[t]he tenor of all . . . [its prior decisions under the Transportation Act of 1920, 41 Stat. 456] was to confirm the power and duty of the Interstate Commerce Commission, regardless of state law, to control rate and capital structures, physical make-up and relations between carriers, in the light of the public interest in an efficient national transportation system." Id. at 192 (emphasis added). Similarly, "[t]he Transportation Act of 1940 [54 Stat. 908, 49 U.S.C. § 5(11)] . . . authorized approval by the Commission of carrier-initiated, voluntary plans of merger or consolidation if, subject to such terms, conditions and modifications as the Commission might prescribe, the proposed transactions met with certain tests of public interest, justice and reasonableness, in which case they should become effective regardless of state authority." Id. at 193 (emphasis added) (footnote omitted).⁶

⁵ Compare Callaway v. Benton, 336 U.S. 132, 141 n.10 (1949) ("Seaboard Air Line R. Co. v. Daniel, 333 U.S. 118; Schwabacher v. United States, 334 U.S. 182; Texas v. United States, 292 U.S. 522.") (emphasis added), with Maj. Op. at 17.

In sum, not only did the Supreme Court not adopt the rigorous "obstacle" standard which the majority today requires, the Court envisioned that the legislative purpose was to grant the Commission greater authority than the majority suggests to override state laws where needed to approve transactions "consistent with the public in- terest" and to ensure that they are "just and reasonable." Schwabacher, 334 U.S. at 194-95.

The majority would admonish us that the ICC's exemption authority under section 11341(a) must operate "according to necessity, not according to whim or caprice" and that in exercising this authority, "ICC must do more than shake a wand to make a law go away." Maj. Op. at 16-17. However, in this case it is not the ICC but the majority of the panel which relies on occult powers. For it is the majority who has made the ICC's section 11341(a) exemption authority completely disappear and who has used its opinion to obscure the basis for the ICC's decision to exempt the crew selection process from any protective labor conditions.

There is no dispute here that the approval of the Katy and Rio Grande trackage rights was "necessary" to the approval of the UP-Missouri Pacific-Western Pacific consolidation. The ICC specifically found that the trackage rights were needed to offset the anticompetitive harms created by the consolidation. 366 I.C.C. 459, 566-79. This court has affirmed this aspect of the ICC's decision. Southern Pacific Transportation v. ICC, 736 F.2d 708 (D.C. Cir. 1984) (per curiam), cert. denied, 53 U.S.L.W. 3597 (U.S. Feb. 19, 1985). But the ICC did not approve the trackage rights in the abstract; rather, it approved, pursuant to this "necessity" finding, the trackage rights as applied for by the Katy and the Rio Grande.

The ICC cannot bootstrap any exemption to its approval of transactions without justification. But this is far from such a case, since the necessity for the waiver is clear. The whole point of granting the trackage rights applications was to reduce the anticompetitive effects of the consolidation (J.A. 169). Under the ICC's decision the Katy and the Rio Grande will be handling traffic for their own accounts, not for the consolidated UP-Missouri Pacific-Western Pacific (Id.). Thus, the trackage rights operations were meant to be conducted in competition with the merged UP-Missouri Pacific-Western Pacific operations, id., and to offset to some extent the monopolistic effects of that enormous consolidation.⁷ The majority opinion gives short shrift to these essential reasons for the ICC's decision. To be sure, the Commission's goal of preservation of competition through the grant of trackage rights might well be frustrated by the prospect of requiring the railroads granted those rights to negotiate with the union representing the employees of its competitors. It is no surprise the Commission did not feel compelled to spell out specifically such a proposition.

Moreover, the majority's self-styled definition of "trackage rights," upon which the opinion depends, reduces that term to nothing more than a railroad's right only to have its traffic run over another's tracks. See Maj. Op. at 7 n.2. The majority assumes, with no justification whatsoever, that this cannot include a railroad's right to use its own crews in operating its own trains. This bespeaks an ignorance of what trackage rights might involve and ignores the crew selection provisions that are an integral part of the applications in this case. The majority, in fact, has pulled its definition out of its magic hat. Indeed, even UTU counsel at oral argument conceded that whether a railroad's "trackage rights" include a railroad's right to use its own crews "is really a very generic term subject to subsequent specific negotiations." The sole evidence of the meaning of the trackage rights that are here involved is found in the trackage rights applications and the decisions granting them.⁸ Those applications stated in express terms that the Katy and Rio Grande would exercise their trackage rights by operating their own trains with their own employees and crews. But rather than at a minimum remanding the record to the ICC for further clarification on this point, the majority decides in the teeth of the specific crew provisions themselves that trackage rights in this case do not include a railroad's right to use its own crews, even though such method of operating its trains was specifically applied for and authorized by the ICC. Such action is unseemly, without precedent, and completely unjustifiable.

That the ICC specifically left open for later negotiation between the railroads such terms as trackage compensation is no reason to infer that crew selection, which was specifically covered in the trackage rights applications, was not decided. Approval of crew selection had been expressly requested in the railroad's application for trackage rights, and both applications had been approved. The ICC similarly considered it a "material term" of the trackage rights transaction (J.A. 171), a finding that the majority attempts to disregard. Whether a railroad uses its own crews to operate its own trains was not the type of "subsidiary" trackage issue the ICC left open for later negotiation. See Maj. Op. at 20-21. To require that Katy and the Rio Grande to submit the issue of crew selection to arbitration could frustrate the trackage rights agreement itself and could destroy one of the essential conditions upon which the ICC approved the merger.

Finally, petitioners cannot now complain that the Commission failed to make a specific finding about the necessity for the crew selection process when no party, including the petitioners, contended during the hearings that granting the pending applications of the Katy and Rio Grande would improperly override existing collective bargaining agreements (J.A. 164, 167). At a minimum, as has been the practice of this court, one would expect the majority under such factual situation to remand the record to the Commission to articulate the majority's required necessity finding.

The majority has thus found itself with the rather absurd result that the Katy and the Rio Grande may not, in the exercise of their trackage rights, use their own employees to operate their own trains carrying their own traffic, for their own account, until the railroads have engaged in collective bargaining under the Railway Labor Act with their employees and possibly those of competitor railroads. As one trial judge has already noted in a related proceeding involving many of the same issues as we have here, "Congress did not intend that affected employees have such power to block consolidations which are in the public interest." Missouri Pacific R.R. v. United Transportation Union, 580 F. Supp. 1490, 1505 (E.D. Mo. 1984), appeal pending (8th Cir.).

In my view, the majority has vacated the ICC's crew provision based on assumptions not supported by the record. It has closed its eyes to the specific pro-competitive purpose that the ICC found would be served by the approval of the trackage rights applications in this case. In doing so, the panel has usurped the statutory authority of the ICC and has substituted its judgment for that of the ICC. I cannot join in such a curtailment of the authority that Congress has granted to the ICC under 49 U.S.C. § 11341(a), and which the ICC exercised to ensure that the consolidation it approved would serve the "public interest." 366 I.C.C. at 572, 644. Since this is one of the largest mergers in the history of American railroads, the majority's failure to correctly apply the law here could lead to tremendous nationwide harm. Accordingly, I dissent.

It is ORDERED by the court, sua sponte, that the opinion for the court filed by Circuit Judge Wright on May 3, 1985, and hereby is, amended as follows:

The fourth full paragraph on page 3 is amended to read:

Because we find that ICC made no semblance of a showing that the exemption was necessary, as required by the exemption authority section, we vacate the ICC decisions and remand the case to the Commisison for proceedings consistent with this opinion.

The only paragraph of text on page 22 is replaced with the following paragraph:

We thus vacate the 1983 orders and remand the case to the Commission. The Commission is not empowered to rely mechanically on its approval of the underlying transaction as justification for the denial of a statutory right. On remand, to exercise its exemption authority, the Commission must explain why termination of the asserted right to participate in crew selection is necessary to effectuate the pro-competitive purpose of the grant of trackage rights or some other purpose sufficiently related to the transaction. Until such a finding of necessity is made, the provisions of the Railway Labor Act and the Interstate Commerce Act remain in force.

By petition filed April 4, 1983, the Brotherhood of cific Railroad Company (UP) and Missouri Pacific Railroad Company (MP) (collectively referred to herein as applicants). The Missouri-Kansas-Texas Railroad Company (MKT), the Denver and Rio Grande Western Railroad Company (DRGW), and applicants have filed replies.

BACKGROUND

Pursuant to 49 U.S.C. 11343-4, applicants sought authority to consolidate their railroad systems under the common control of Union Pacific Corporation and Pacific Rail System, Inc., a new railroad holding company.² The consolidation decision, served October 20, 1982, which BLE seeks to have clarified, approved the proposed transaction³ subject to various conditions. These conditions included approval of DRGW and MKT responsive trackage rights applications in the embraced Sub-No. 18 and Sub-No. 25 proceedings, respectively. The approved trackage rights authorize DRGW to operate over MP's line between Pueblo, CO, and Kansas City, MO, and authorize MKT to operate over MP's line between Kansas City, KS and Omaha, NE. Approval of the consolidation was conditioned upon the grant of these trackage rights in order to protect the public interest from potential anticompetitive harms.

POSITIONS OF THE PARTIES

BLE: BLE seeks to have the consolidation decision clarified with respect to whether MKT and DRGW may use their own operating crews in performing trackage rights operations over MP lines. It asserts that this Commission has no jurisdiction over crew assignment matters and that our decision should not be construed as authorizing MKT or DRGW to use their own crews in the performance of the approved operations. It indicates that these matters are subject to settlement in accordance with the Railway Labor Act and are not within the scope of our decision approving the responsive trackage rights applications.

² In another application, handled on a consolidated basis, UP sought authority to acquire control of Western Pacific Railroad Company.

³ The consolidation was subsequently consummated on December 22, 1982.

MKT: MKT asserts that the consolidation decision clearly and correctly authorizes it to conduct trackage rights operations using its own crews. MKT's operating plan submitted as part of its trackage rights application specified that the operations would be conducted using MKT crews. The application was approved without restrictions on the proposed operating plan. MKT notes that we have very broad conditioning powers under 49 U.S.C. 11343 in consolidation proceedings and that our jurisdiction over consolidations, and the terms and conditions thereof, is plenary under 49 U.S.C. 11341.

DRGW: DRGW contends that our later decisions in these proceedings, served November 24, 1982, and January 18, 1983, regarding DRGW trackage rights operations clearly and unambiguously state that DRGW has been authorized to conduct operations over MP lines using its own crews. Therefore, DRGW considers this issue to be moot with respect to its operations.

Applicants: Applicants argue that the consolidation clearly authorized MKT and DRGW to operate using their own crews. The trackage rights applications specified that the trackage rights tenants would use their own crews and no party opposed that aspect of the plans during the course of these proceedings. Approval of the applications, including the operating plans, they state, is within our jurisdiction.

DISCUSSION AND CONCLUSIONS

The consolidation decision does not require clarification. We approved the responsive trackage rights applications of DRGW and MKT in Sub-No. 18 and Sub-No. 25 subject only to applicable employee protective conditions and the requirement that the parties negotiate compensation for use of the MP lines (or request us to set compensation in the event of an impasse). Inasmuch as DRGW and MKT proposed in their applications that the operations would be performed with their own crews, our approval of the applications authorizes such operations. Our decisions of November 24, 1982, and January 18, 1983, unambiguously specified that trackage rights tenants may perform operations using their own crews.⁴

BLE has presented no argument or evidence setting forth any issue in need of clarification. Rather, BLE is attempting to reargue an issue that has already been decided. Its petition does not present any facts, however, that warrant reopening these proceedings for reconsideration. We have broad authority to impose conditions on consolidations and our jurisdiction is plenary. Therefore, we properly authorized performance of trackage rights tenants using their own crews. The petition will be denied.

This action will not significantly affect the quality of the human environment or energy conservation.

It is ordered:

1. The petition of BLE for clarification is denied.
2. This decision shall be effective on the date it is served.

By the Commission, Chairman Taylor, Vice Chairman Sterrett, Commissioners Andre and Gradison.

PETITION FOR CLARIFICATION

Decided: October 19, 1983

[Served: October 25, 1983]

By petition filed May 31, 1983, the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers (BLE) and United Transportation Union (UTU) seek reconsideration of our decision served May 18, 1983, denying BLE's petition for clarification in these proceedings. Replies have been filed by Missouri-Kansas-Texas Railroad Company (MKT), Denver and Rio Grande Western Railroad Company (DRGW), and jointly by Union Pacific Railroad Company (UP) and Missouri Pacific Railroad Company (MP). UTU has petitioned for leave to file a reply to the replies.

PROCEDURAL MATTER

Our Rules of Practice do not permit a reply to a reply, 49 C.F.R. 1104.13(c). UTU, however, contends that its tendered reply is necessary for a clear presentation of the issues. As the reply does not broaden the scope of UTU's petition, we will accept the reply for filing so that we may fully address the issues.

BACKGROUND

By decision served October 20, 1982, the Commission approved the consolidation of UP and MP under the common control of Union Pacific Corporation and Pacific Rail System, Inc. Union Pacific-Control-Missouri Pacific; Western Pacific, 366 I.C.C. 459 (1982). Several railroads, including DRGW and MKT, opposed the consolidation and filed responsive applications for the imposition of trackage rights conditions. BLE, UTU, and various other railway labor organizations opposed the consolidation and actively participated in the consolidation and responsive trackage rights applications proceedings.

As conditions to approval of the consolidation we approved DRGW's application for trackage rights over MP's line between Pueblo, CO and Kansas City, MO and MKT's applications for trackage rights over UP and MP lines extending between Kansas City, KS, Topeka, KS, Omaha, NE, and Lincoln, NE. Pursuant to 49 U.S.C. 11343-4, we approved the proposed trackage rights agreements submitted by DRGW and MKT in their responsive applications, subject to determination of fair compensation for use of the trackage rights and further subject to our usual employee protective conditions.¹ DRGW's proposed agreement specified that DRGW could, at its option, perform trackage rights operations using its own crews. MKT, pursuant to its proposed agreement, would use its own crews in performing its operations.

After consummation of the consolidation, DRGW and MKT began performing the approved trackage rights operations. A dispute then arose between the involved railroads and BLE over whether the trackage rights tenants could perform operations over MP's lines using their own crews without the consent of the unions representing MP's employees. BLE's petition for clarification sought a decision stating that this Commission has no jurisdiction over these crew assignment disputes and that the consolidation decision and approval of trackage rights did not authorize DRGW and MKT to operate over MP lines using their own crews. BLE and UTU now seek reconsideration of our decision denying that request for relief.

In its petition for reconsideration, BLE contends that this Commission has no jurisdiction over crew assignment disputes and that they must be settled under the procedures of the Railway Labor Act (RLA) 45 U.S.C. 151, et seq. BLE further asserts that trackage rights operations by DRGW and MKT using their own crews constitute a unilateral change in working conditions by MP in violation of the labor protective conditions imposed on the consolidation.²

UTU argues that the Commission's plenary jurisdiction over railroad consolidations does not authorize us to immunize a transaction from the requirements of the RLA or to approve unilateral changes of collective bargaining agreements. UTU states in the alternative that if the Commission has jurisdiction it failed to make necessary findings supporting overriding the RLA or showing how the policies of the RLA were accommodated with those of the Interstate Commerce Act.

² The consolidation is subject to the usual labor protective conditions as set forth in New York Dock Ry.—Control-Brooklyn Eastern Dist., 360 I.C.C. 60 (1979) (New York Dock conditions).

In their replies, DRGW, MKT, and UP-MP assert that the arguments of BLE and UTU are legally incorrect, that petitioners have failed to satisfy the procedural requirements for reopening a proceeding, and that the allegations of violations of the RLA and collective bargaining agreements were not raised during the course of the proceedings on the consolidation and the responsive trackage rights applications.

UTU, in its response to the railroads' pleadings, makes further arguments regarding purported violations of the RLA, collective bargaining agreements, and the New York Dock conditions. It asserts that the trackage rights operations involve work which, by custom, is to be performed by MP employees. Thus, operations using the tenants' crews are unauthorized transfers of the work in violation of the RLA. It further states that only the Federal Courts have jurisdiction to determine whether an agreement violates the RLA. UTU also argues that we did not, and could not, determine that MP employees have no right to participate in the trackage rights crew selection process. It contends that such a determination would deprive MP employees of property rights without due process and would violate the requirements of 49 U.S.C. 11347 and of the NW-BN and New York Dock conditions.

DISCUSSION AND CONCLUSIONS

The various arguments of BLE and UTU are all based essentially on the assertion that the proposed trackage rights operations which we have approved involve UP-MP unilaterally changing the working conditions of their employees by transferring work which, by custom and under collective bargaining agreements, is to be performed by UP-MP employees. This purported change, petitioners argue, violates the RLA and the New York Dock and NW-BN conditions. Petitioners contend that UP-MP employees, through their bargaining agents, have the right to participate in the trackage rights crew selection process and have the right to have any related disputes resolved pursuant to the RLA and the applicable labor protective conditions. We find these arguments to be unpersuasive and unsupported by the record in these proceedings.

Jurisdiction. Although we conclude that the trackage rights agreements do not involve a change in UP-MP employees' working conditions in a manner contrary to RLA requirements, we will address UTU's argument that we lack jurisdiction under 49 U.S.C. 11341, to exempt a transaction from the requirements of the RLA.

The Commission's jurisdiction over railroad consolidations and trackage rights transactions, within the scope of 49 U.S.C. 11343, is exclusive. Our approval exempts such a transaction from the requirements of all laws as necessary to permit the transaction to be carried out, and includes an exemption from the requirements of the RLA. See Brotherhood of Loc. Eng. v. Chicago & North Western Ry. Co., 314 F.2d 424, 432 (8th Cir. 1963), cert. denied 375 U.S. 819 (1963).

Contrary to UTU's arguments, the 4-R Act³ did not limit our authority to exempt a transaction from the RLA. Rather, the 4-R Act specified standards for the minimum level of employee protection to be imposed as conditions to the approval of certain transactions. Those standards, however, do not require preserving rights under the RLA. Affected carrier employees have rights to the extent specified in the protective conditions imposed pursuant to 49 U.S.C. 11347.

As UTU notes, standard labor protection conditions generally preserve working conditions and collective bargaining agreements. The terms of those conditions, however, must be read in conjunction with our decision authorizing the involved transaction and the underlying statutory scheme. To the extent that existing working conditions and collective bargaining agreements conflict with a transaction which we have approved, those conditions and agreements must give way to the implementation of the transaction. The labor conditions imposed under section 11347 preserve conditions and agreements in the context of the authorized transaction.

Employees adversely affected by the transaction may receive benefits under the protective conditions and under pre-existing agreements to the extent those benefits are not pyramided. If our approval of a transaction did not include authority for the railroads to make necessary changes in working conditions, subject to payment of specified benefits, our jurisdiction to approve transactions requiring changes of the working conditions of any employees would be substantially nullified. Such a result would be clearly contrary to congressional intent. The discussion of this point in Brotherhood of Loc. Eng., supra, at 430-1, is persuasive and we conclude that this reasoning is unaffected by the enactment of the 4-R Act.

Supporting Findings. Petitioners argue that even if the Commission has jurisdiction to exempt the transactions from the RLA, we failed to do so in this proceeding. Further, they argue that we have not attempted to reconcile the decision with the policies of the RLA nor made any findings supporting an exemption from the RLA.

The terms of section 11341 immunizing an approved transaction from any other laws are self-executing and there is no need for us expressly to order or to declare that a carrier is specifically relieved from certain restraints. See Brotherhood of Loc. Eng. supra, citing Chicago, St. P., M. & O. Ry. Lease, 295 I.C.C. 696, at 432 (1958).

In evaluating a transaction under the criteria of 49 U.S.C. 11344, we must consider the policies of statutes other than the Interstate Commerce Act to the extent that those policies are relevant to the determination of whether a proposal is consistent with the public interest. For example, the public interest evaluation must include consideration of the policies of the antitrust laws. See McLean Trucking Co. v. United States, 321 U.S. 67, 87 (1944).

While the RLA, like the antitrust laws, embodies certain public policy considerations, the Interstate Commerce Act also specifies that the interests of affected employees must be considered. In these proceedings we gave full consideration to the impact of the consolidation on railroad employees in accordance with our established policies. 366 I.C.C. 618-22.

The record in these proceedings is devoid of any suggestion by BLE, UTU, or any other party that the approval of the responsive trackage rights applications, subject to the usual labor protective conditions, would be in any way inconsistent with the policies of the RLA. In these circumstances, we can find no merit in UTU's argument that we improperly failed to reconcile the policies of the RLA with our decision.

Labor Conditions. Petitioners contend that operations by the trackage rights tenants, using their own crews, over UP-MP lines would constitute a unilateral change in working conditions for UP-MP employees in violation of the NW-BN and New York Dock conditions. They further contend that these crew assignment disputes are labor issues in which the Commission should not be involved. As previously discussed, the standard labor conditions do not freeze working conditions which must be altered to implement an approved transaction. The record in these proceedings strongly supports the conclusion that the approved trackage rights operations are not inconsistent with the terms of any collective bargaining agreements or of the imposed labor conditions.

BLE, UTU, and various other railway labor organizations participated in these proceedings, and none made any argument or presented any evidence that the responsive trackage rights proposals would violate any applicable labor agreements. Rather, the record supports the conclusion that the trackage rights operations, using the tenants' crews, could be implemented as approved without raising any dispute over crew assignments between the employees of different railroads.

The responsive trackage rights applications in these proceedings were filed in January 1981, and in accordance with regulations, included proposed trackage rights agreements which specified the operating conditions for the trackage rights. The agreement in MKT's application specified: "MKT, with its own employees, and its sole cost and expense, shall operate its engines, cars and trains on and along Joint Track." Proposed agreement Section 5, MKT trackage rights application, Finance Docket No. 30,000 (Sub-No. 25) (MKT-25). DRGW's application provided: "Rio Grande may, at its option, elect to employ its own crews for the movement of its trains, locomotives and cars to points on or over the Joint Track" Proposed agreement Section 6(c) (3), DRGW trackage rights application, Finance Docket No. 30,000 (Sub-No. 18) (DRGW-8). Therefore, in January 1981, over a month before the commencement of hearings, all parties had notice that the responsive trackage rights applicants sought authority to perform operations using their own crews.

On February 20, 1981, DRGW and MKT filed their verified statements in support of their responsive applications. These statements further make clear the position of those carriers that, if their applications were approved, they would have the right to conduct trackage rights operations using their own crews. For example, DRGW's evidence stated: "If our trackage rights applications are granted, both over WP⁴ and MP, we anticipate that a fewer number of employees will be displaced, or a reduction of 176 jobs as opposed to 350 jobs if these applications are not granted." Verified Statement of A. H. Nance, at 15. MKT's evidence stated: "The projected position impacts shown on Exhibit 4 [to the trackage rights applications] reflect our determination of the number of positions that would be created, eliminated or transferred, or the other affects of such actions due to the acquisition of trackage rights. Our determinations were based primarily on the essential provisions of the applicable labor agreements and consultation with other carrier officers." Verified Statement of Harold M. Hacker, at 2. These verified statements clearly demonstrate the intent of MKT and DRGW to operate using their own crews. The assessments of labor impacts make no mention of any possibility of UP-MP employees having any right to perform the proposed operations.

During the course of hearings in these proceedings, DRGW and MKT witnesses Nance and Hacker were cross-examined on the testimony in their verified statements. No labor party cross-examined Mr. Hacker. See Transcript, Finance Docket No. 30,000, Bifurcated Hearing, June 23, 1981, at 3398-3417. Thus, Mr. Hacker's testimony regarding labor impact on MKT employees as a result of approval of the proposed trackage rights operations stands in the record without qualification.

Mr. Nance was cross-examined by various parties, including UTU. Under cross-examination by counsel for UP-MP, Mr. Nance testified that DRGW was willing to negotiate with UP-MP regarding whose crews would perform operations. Transcript, Finance Docket No. 30,000, June 23, 1981, at 8432-3. He testified that "as these trackage rights are granted to us we are willing to sit down and work out any kind of arrangement you [UP-MP] want," at 8433, also see at 8449-50. Mr. Nance's testimony clearly states that the decision whether to use UP-MP or DRGW crews would be a matter solely within the discretion of the managements of the railroads. At no point does he indicate that UP-MP employees would have any right to participate in the decision-making process.

Following cross-examination by applicants, the labor parties had the opportunity to cross-examine Mr. Nance. BLE did not question him. Counsel for UTU's cross-examination dealt exclusively with Mr. Nance's projection of the impact of the primary transactions on DRGW's employees. No questions were asked regarding DRGW's assessment of the labor impacts of its sought responsive trackage rights. Transcript at 8555-8.

BLE and UTU submitted evidence and presented witnesses in opposition to the responsive trackage rights applications. Nowhere in these evidentiary presentations did the labor parties indicate that UP-MP employees would have a right to participate in the selection of which railroad's crews would perform trackage rights operations.

On July 3, 1981, BLE submitted the verified statement of Edmund G. Becker in opposition to trackage rights over UP lines. Prepared Statement BLE-1, entered into evidence as BLE-H(VS)-2. Mr. Becker noted that the trackage rights applicants intended to perform operations using their own crews. He testified that granting the responsive applications "would have an adverse effect on the engineers currently handling the traffic received from and delivered to the Missouri-Kansas-Texas Railroad at Kansas City [and] . . . it would be safe to say that no less than two hundred-sixty (260) engineers would be affected due to the ripple effect" BLE-H(VS) 2, at 4. The verified statement does not suggest that UP engineers would have any protection from these adverse consequences under any collective bargaining agreements or the RLA. Further, on cross-examination, Mr. Becker did not indicate that UP engineers would have any right to participate in trackage rights work force selection. Rather, he testified that UP engineers would be adversely affected by approval of the responsive applications. Transcript, at 12,974-81, September 16, 1981.

On August 31, 1981, the parties identified as Various Labor Organizations, including UTU, submitted verified statements (VLO-H(VS)-2). Representatives of UTU provided verified statements included in VLO-H(VS)-2. None of those statements, however, contain testimony supporting the assertion that UP-MP employees would have any right to participate in the trackage rights crew selection process.

Finally, in their post-hearing briefs neither UTU nor BLE made any arguments or cite any evidence in support of the positions they now advocate. The brief for Various Labor Organizations, in its statement of facts, cites Mr. Nance's testimony regarding labor impact of the consolidation, with and without approval of DRGW's trackage rights application. Thus, the brief filed on behalf of UTU accepts labor impact evidence which assumes that trackage rights operations would be performed by the tenant using its own crews. BLE's brief does not discuss the labor impacts of the responsive trackage rights. Rather, it merely made reference to BLE-H(VS)-2 on that point. Thus, the record contains no evidence to support the contention of UTU and BLE that UP-MP employees have rights under collective bargaining agreements to participate in the trackage rights crew selection process.

Further, petitioners' argument regarding the alleged unilateral change of working conditions mischaracterizes the nature of the trackage rights operations. BLE and UTU have cited decisions such as St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. v. Broth. of Railroad Signalmen, 665 F.2d 987 (10th Cir. 1981) for the proposition that railroads cannot transfer or contract out work which, under collective bargaining agreements and by custom, is to be done by their own employees. These decisions are not relevant with respect to the trackage rights crew assignments in issue here. We approved the MKT and DRGW trackage rights applications to ameliorate certain anticompetitive impacts of the UP-MP consolidation. Those trackage rights operations will be conducted in competition with UP-MP operations. MKT and DRGW will be handling traffic for their own accounts not for UP-MP. UP-MP has not transferred or contracted out any work by agreeing to the trackage rights as a condition to the consolidation.

BLE and UTU both contend that our decision denying BLE's petition for clarification is inconsistent with our general policy of not injecting the Commission into labor disputes. In support, petitioners cite Finance Docket No. 28046, Illinois Central Gulf R. Co.-Trackage Rights-Over Chicago & I.M. Ry. Co. (not printed), served February 22, 1977 and Finance Docket No. 30138, Cairo Terminal Railroad Co.-Trackage Rights Exemption-Illinois C.G. R. Co. (not printed), served May 17, 1983.

In Illinois Central Gulf, the Commission approved a trackage rights agreement which included a provision that the trackage rights tenant would perform operations using its own crews. UTU filed a petition for reconsideration asserting that the Commission had no authority to impose a crew assignment condition and requesting that the condition be removed. The Commission, Division 3, dismissed the petition for reconsideration finding that the crew assignment provision of the agreement was not a condition imposed by the Commission pursuant to the section of the Interstate Commerce Act now codified as 49 U.S.C. 11347. Rather, the provision was a negotiated agreement between the railroads. The provision was approved (and thus immunized it from all other laws) because it would have no adverse transportation effects. The Division noted that the Review Board, in approving the trackage rights, declined jurisdiction over all other subject matters and the Division concluded that the Commission has no jurisdiction to impose or to remove crew assignment provisions.

UTU and BLE ask us for the same relief the Commission denied in Illinois Central Gulf. The Commission has the power to approve (and to immunize from other laws) crew assignment provisions in trackage rights agreements. These provisions are not labor conditions and cannot be removed or modified in the manner applicable to labor conditions.

In Cairo Terminal, the involved railroads sought an exemption for a proposed trackage rights agreement. The agreement contained a provision regarding which carrier's employees would perform the trackage rights operations. UTU protested the exemption request and requested that the Commission expressly disclaim jurisdiction over the crew assignment provision. UTU's argument was not considered because the Commission's action in that proceeding was based on 49 U.S.C. 10505, not on 49 U.S.C. 11344 relating to approval of trackage rights agreements. The decision noted, however, that "Crew assignment provisions in trackage rights agreements are within this Commission's subject matter jurisdiction to the extent they relate to the transportation effects of the proposed transaction." Slip op., at 8.

Trackage rights agreements are considered under the criteria of 49 U.S.C. 11344 and if those criteria are met, the agreement is approved. The approval confers self-executing immunity on all material terms of the agreement from all other law to the extent necessary to permit implementation of the agreement. To the extent employees are adversely affected by the transaction they are entitled to benefits under the conditions imposed pursuant to 49 U.S.C. 11347.

Provisions of trackage rights agreements designating which carrier's employees will perform trackage rights operations are material terms of the agreement and may be implemented without any other approval. Further, the agreement is exempted from any requirements of law that could frustrate implementation of the trackage rights agreement as approved, including the crew assignment provision.

This action will not significantly affect either the quality of the human environment or energy consumption.

It is ordered:

1. The petitions of BLE and UTU for reconsideration are denied.

2. This decision shall be effective on the date it is served.

By the Commission, Chairman Taylor, Vice Chairman Sterrett, Commissioners Andre and Gradison.

APPENDIX H

STATUTES INVOLVED

Section 11341, Title 49, United States Code provides that:

Scope of authority

(a) The authority of the Interstate Commerce Commission under this subchapter is exclusive. A carrier or corporation participating in or resulting from a transaction approved by or exempted by the Commission under this subchapter may carry out the transaction, own and operate property, and exercise control or franchises acquired through the transaction without the approval of a State authority. A carrier, corporation, or person participating in that approved or exempted transaction is exempt from the antitrust laws and from all other law, including State and municipal law, as necessary to let that person carry out the transaction, hold, maintain, and operate property, and exercise control or franchises acquired through the transaction. However, if a purchase and sale, a lease, or a corporate consolidation or merger is involved in the transaction, the carrier or corporation may carry out the transaction only with the assent of a majority, or the number required under applicable State law, of the votes of the holders of the capital stock of that corporation entitled to vote. The vote must occur at a regular meeting, or special meeting called for that purpose, of those stockholders and the notice of the meeting must indicate its purpose.

(b) A power granted under this subchapter to a carrier or corporation is in addition to and changes its powers under its corporate charter and under State law. Action under this subchapter does not establish or provide for establishing a corporation under the laws of the United States.

Section 11343, Title 49, United States Code provides that:

Consolidation, merger, and acquisition of control

(a) The following transactions involving carriers providing transportation subject to the jurisdiction of the Interstate Commerce Commission under subchapter I (except a pipeline carrier), II, or III of chapter 105 of this title may be carried out only with the approval and authorization of the Commission:

(1) consolidation or merger of the properties or franchises of at least 2 carriers into one corporation for the ownership, management, and operation of the previously separately owned properties.

(2) a purchase, lease, or contract to operate property of another carrier by any number of carriers.

(3) acquisition of control of a carrier by any number of carriers.

(4) acquisition of control of at least 2 carriers by a person that is not a carrier.

(5) acquisition of control of a carrier by a person that is not a carrier but that controls any number of carriers.

(6) acquisition by a rail carrier of trackage rights over, or joint ownership in or joint use of, a railroad line (and terminals incidental to it) owned or operated by another rail carrier.

(b) A person may carry out a transaction referred to in subsection (a) of this section or participate in achieving the control or management, including the power to exercise control or management, in a common interest of more than one of those carriers, regardless of how that result is reached, only with the approval and authorization of the Commission under this subchapter. In addition to other transactions, each of the following transactions are considered achievements of control or management:

(1) A transaction by a carrier has the effect of putting that carrier and persons affiliated with it, taken together, in control of another carrier.

(2) A transaction by a person affiliated with a carrier has the effect of putting that carrier and persons affiliated with it, taken together, in control of another carrier.

(3) A transaction by at least 2 persons acting together (one of whom is a carrier or is affiliated with a carrier) has the effect of putting those persons and carriers and persons affiliated with any of them, or with any of those affiliated carriers, taken together, in control of another carrier.

(c) A person is affiliated with a carrier under this subchapter if, because of the relationship between that person and a carrier, it is reasonable to believe that the affairs of another carrier, control of which may be acquired by that person, will be managed in the interest of the other carrier.

(d) (1) Approval and authorization by the Commission are not required if the only parties to a transaction referred to in subsection (a) of this section are motor carriers providing transportation subject to the jurisdiction of the Commission under subchapter II of chapter 105 of this title and the aggregate gross operating revenues of those carriers were not more than $2,000,000 during a period of 12 consecutive months ending not more than 6 months before the date of the agreement of the parties covering the transaction. However, the approval and authorization of the Commission is required when a motor carrier that is controlled by or affiliated with a carrier providing transportation subject to the jurisdiction of the Commission under subchapter I of that chapter is a party to the transaction.

(2) The approval and authorization of the Commission are not required if the only parties to a transaction referred to in subsection (a) of this section are street, suburban, or interurban electric railways that are not controlled by or under common control with a carrier that is operated as part of a general railroad system of transportation.

(e) (1) Notwithstanding any provisions of this title, the Interstate Commerce Commission, in a matter related to a motor carrier of property providing transportation subject to the jurisdiction of the Commission under subchapter II of chapter 105 of this title, may exempt a person, class of persons, transaction, or class of transactions from the merger, consolidation, and acquisition of control provisions of this subchapter if the Commission finds that—

(A) the application of such provisions is not necessary to carry out the transportation policy of section 10101 of this title; and

(B) either (i) the transaction is of limited scope, or (ii) the application of such provisions is not needed to protect shippers from the abuse of market power.

(2) At least 60 days before any transaction exempt under this subsection from the merger consolidation, and acquisition of control provisions of this subchapter may take effect, each carrier intending to participate in such transaction shall file with the Commission a notice of its intention to participate in such transaction and shall give public notice of such intention. The Commission shall prescribe the information to be contained in such notices, including the nature and scope of the transaction.

(3) The Commission, on its own initiative or on complaint, may revoke an exemption granted under this subsection, to the extent it specifies, when it finds that application of the provisions of this section to the person, class of persons, or transportation is necessary to carry out the transportation policy of section 10101 of this title.

(4) If the Commission, on its own initiative, finds that employees of any carrier intending to participate in a transaction exempt under this subsection from the merger, consolidation, and acquisition of control provisions of this subchapter are or will be adversely affected by such transaction or if employees of such carrier adversely affected by such transaction file a complaint concerning such transaction with the Commission, the Commission shall revoke such exemption to the extent the Commission deems necessary to review and address the adverse effects on such employees.

Section 11344, Title 49, United States Code provides that:

Consolidation, merger, and acquisition of control: general procedure and conditions of approval

(a) The Interstate Commerce Commission may begin a proceeding to approve and authorize a transaction referred to in section 11343 of this title on application of the person seeking that authority. When an application is filed with the Commission, the Commission shall notify the chief executive officer of each State in which property of the carriers involved in the proposed transaction is located and shall notify those carriers. If a motor carrier providing transportation subject to the jurisdiction of the Commission under subchapter II of chapter 105 of this title is involved in the transaction, the Commission must notify the persons specified in section 10328(b) of this title. The Commission shall hold a public hearing when a rail carrier providing transportation subject to the jurisdiction of the Commission under subchapter I of that chapter is involved in the transaction unless the Commission determines that a public hearing is not necessary in the public interest.

(b) (1) In a proceeding under this section which involves the merger or control of at least two class I railroads, as defined by the Commission, the Commission shall consider at least the following:

(A) the effect of the proposed transaction on the adequacy of transportation to the public.

(B) the effect on the public interest of including, or failing to include, other rail carriers in the area involved in the proposed transaction.

(C) the total fixed charges that result from the proposed transaction.

(D) the interest of carrier employees affected by the proposed transaction.

(E) whether the proposed transaction would have an adverse effect on competition among rail carriers in the affected region.

(2) In a proceeding under this section which involves only carriers of passengers providing transportation subject to the jurisdiction of the Interstate Commerce Commission under subchapter II of chapter 105 of this title, the Commission shall consider at least the following:

(A) the effect of the proposed transaction on the adequacy of transportation to the public.

(B) the effect on the public interest of including, or failing to include, other rail carriers in the area involved in the proposed transaction.

(C) the total fixed charges that result from the proposed transaction.

(D) the interest of carrier employees affected by the proposed transaction.

(c) The Commission shall approve and authorize a transaction under this section when it finds the transaction is consistent with the public interest. The Commission may impose conditions governing the transaction. When the transaction contemplates a guaranty or assumption of payment of dividends or of fixed charges or will result in an increase of total fixed charges, the Commission may approve and authorize the transaction only if it finds that the guaranty, assumption, or increase is consistent with the public interest. When a rail carrier, or a person controlled by or affiliated with a rail carrier, is an applicant and the transaction involves a motor carrier, the Commission may approve and authorize the transaction only if it finds that the transaction is consistent with the public interest, will enable the rail carrier to use motor carrier transportation to public advantage in its operations, and will not unreasonably restrain competition. When a rail carrier is involved in the transaction, the Commission may require inclusion of other rail carriers located in the area involved in the transaction if they apply for inclusion and the Commission finds their inclusion to be consistent with the public interest.

(d) In a proceeding under this section which does not involve the merger or control of at least two class I railroads, as defined by the Commission, the Commission shall approve such an application unless it finds that—

(1) as a result of the transaction, there is likely to be substantial lessening of competition, creation of a monopoly, or restraint of trade in freight surface transportation in any region of the United States; and

(2) the anticompetitive effects of the transaction outweigh the public interest in meeting significant transportation needs.

In making such findings, the Commission shall, with respect to any application that is part of a plan or proposal developed under section 333(a)-(d) of this title, accord substantial weight to any recommendations of the Secretary of Transportation. The provisions of this subsection do not apply to any proceeding under this section which involves only carriers of passengers providing transportation subject to the jurisdiction of the Commission under subchapter II of chapter 105 of this title.

(e) A rail carrier, or a person controlled by or affiliated with a rail carrier, together with one or more affected shippers, may apply for approval under this subsection of a transaction for the purpose of providing motor carrier transportation prior or subsequent to rail transportation to serve inadequately served shippers located on a railroad other than the applicant carrier. Such application shall be approved by the Commission if the applicants demonstrate presently impaired rail service and inadequate motor common carrier service which results in the serious failure of the rail carrier serving the shippers to meet the rail equipment or transportation schedules of shippers or seriously to fail otherwise to provide adequate normal rail services required by shippers and which shippers would reasonably expect the rail carrier to provide. The Commission shall approve or disapprove applications under this subsection within 30 days after receipt of such application. The Commission shall approve applications which are not protested by interested parties within 30 days following receipt of such application.

Section 11347, Title 49, United States Code provides that:

Employee protective arrangements in transactions involving rail carriers

When a rail carrier is involved in a transaction for which approval is sought under sections 11344 and 11345 or section 11346 of this title, the Interstate Commerce Commission shall require the carrier to provide a fair arrangement at least as protective of the interest of employees who are affected by the transaction as the terms imposed under this section before February 5, 1976, and the terms established under section 405 of the Rail Passenger Service Act (45 U.S.C. 565). Notwithstanding this subtitle, the arrangement may be made by the rail carrier and the authorized representative of its employees. The arrangement and the order approving the transaction must require that the employees of the affected rail carrier will not be in a worse position related to their employment as a result of the transaction during the 4 years following the effective date of the final action of the Commission (or if an employee was employed for a lesser period of time by the carrier before the action became effective, for that lesser period).

Section 156, Title 45, United States Code provides that:

Procedure in changing rates of pay, rules and working conditions

Carriers and representatives of the employees shall give at least thirty days' written notice of an intended change in agreements affecting rates of pay, rules, or working conditions, and the time and place for the beginning of conference between the representatives of the parties interested in such intended changes shall be agreed upon within ten days after the receipt of said notice, and said time shall be within the thirty days provided in the notice. In every case where such notice of intended change has been given, or conferences are being held with reference thereto, or the services of the Mediation Board have been requested by either party, or said Board has proffered its services, rates of pay, rules, or working conditions shall not be altered by the carrier until the controversy has been finally acted upon, as required by section 155 of this title, by the Mediation Board, unless a period of ten days has elapsed after termination of conferences without request for or proffer of the services of the Mediation Board:

Section 157, Title 45, United States Code provides that:

Arbitration

First. Submission of controversy to arbitration

Whenever a controversy shall arise between a carrier or carriers and its or their employees which is not settled either in conference between representatives of the parties or by the appropriate adjustment board or through mediation, in the manner provided in sections 151-156 of this title, such controversy may, by agreement of the parties to such controversy, be submitted to the arbitration of a board of three (or, if the parties to the controversy so stipulate, of six) persons: Provided, however, That the failure or refusal of either party to submit a controversy to arbitration shall not be construed as a violation of any legal obligation imposed upon such party by the terms of this chapter or otherwise.

Second. Manner of selecting board of arbitration

Such board of arbitration shall be chosen in the following manner:

(a) In the case of a board of three the carrier or carriers and the representatives of the employees, parties respectively to the agreement to arbitrate, shall each name one arbitrator; the two arbitrators thus chosen shall select a third arbitrator. If the arbitrators chosen by the parties shall fail to name the third arbitrator within five days after their first meeting, such third arbitrator shall be named by the Mediation Board.

(b) In the case of a board of six the carrier or carriers and the representatives of the employees, parties respectively to the agreement to arbitrate, shall each name two arbitrators; the four arbitrators thus chosen shall, by a majority vote, select the remaining two arbitrators. If the arbitrators chosen by the parties shall fail to name the two arbitrators within fifteen days after their first meeting, the said two arbitrators, or as many of them as have not been named, shall be named by the Mediation Board.

Third. Board of arbitration; organization; compensation; procedure

(a) Notice of selection or failure to select arbitrators

When the arbitrators selected by the respective parties have agreed upon the remaining arbitrator or arbitrators, they shall notify the Mediation Board; and, in the event of their failure to agree upon any or upon all of the necessary arbitrators within the period fixed by this chapter, they shall, at the expiration of such period, notify the Mediation Board of the arbitrators selected, if any, or of their failure to make or to complete such selection.

(b) Organization of board; procedure

The board of arbitration shall organize and select its own chairman and make all necessary rules for conducting its hearings: Provided, however, That the board of arbitration shall be bound to give the parties to the controversy a full and fair hearing, which shall include an opportunity to present evidence in support of their claims, and an opportunity to present their case in person, by counsel, or by other representative as they may respectively elect.

(c) Duty to reconvene; questions considered

Upon notice from the Mediation Board that the parties, or either party, to an arbitration desire the reconvening of the board of arbitration (or a subcommittee of such board of arbitration appointed for such purpose pursuant to the agreement to arbitrate) to pass upon any controversy over the meaning or application of their award, the board, or its subcommittee, shall at once reconvene. No question other than, or in addition to, the questions relating to the meaning or application of the award, submitted by the party or parties in writing, shall be considered by the reconvened board of arbitration or its subcommittee.

Such rulings shall be acknowledged by such board or subcommittee thereof in the same manner, and filed in the same district court clerk's office, as the original award and become a part thereof.

(d) Competency of arbitrators

No arbitrator, except those chosen by the Mediation Board, shall be incompetent to act as an arbitrator because of his interest in the controversy to be arbitrated, or because of his connection with or partiality to either of the parties to the arbitration.

(e) Compensation and expenses

Each member of any board of arbitration created under the provisions of this chapter named by either party to the arbitration shall be compensated by the party naming him. Each arbitrator selected by the arbitrators or named by the Mediation Board shall receive from the Mediation Board such compensation as the Mediation Board may fix, together with his necessary traveling expenses and expenses actually incurred for subsistence, while serving as an arbitrator.

(f) Award; disposition of original and copies

The board of arbitration shall furnish a certified copy of its award to the respective parties to the controversy, and shall transmit the original, together with the papers and proceedings and a transcript of the evidence taken at the hearings, certified under the hands of at least a majority of the arbitrators, to the clerk of the district court of the United States for the district wherein the controversy arose or the arbitration is entered into, to be filed in said clerk's office as hereinafter provided. The said board shall also furnish a certified copy of its award, and the papers and proceedings, including testimony relating thereto, to the Mediation Board to be filed in its office; and in addition a certified copy of its award shall be filed in the office of the Interstate Commerce Commission: Provided, however, That such award shall not be construed to diminish or extinguish any of the powers or duties of the Interstate Commerce Commission, under the Interstate Commerce Act, under subtitle IV of title 49.

(g) Compensation of assistants to board of arbitration; expenses; quarters

A board of arbitration may, subject to the approval of the Mediation Board, employ and fix the compensation of such assistants as it deems necessary in carrying on the arbitration proceedings. The compensation of such employees, together with their necessary traveling expenses and expenses actually incurred for subsistence, while so employed, and the necessary expenses of boards of arbitration, shall be paid by the Mediation Board.

Whenever practicable, the board shall be supplied with suitable quarters in any Federal building located at its place of meeting or at any place where the board may conduct its proceedings or deliberations.

(h) Testimony before board; oaths; attendance of witnesses; production of documents; subpoenas; fees

All testimony before said board shall be given under oath or affirmation, and any member of the board shall have the power to administer oaths or affirmations. The board of arbitration, or any member thereof, shall have the power to require the attendance of witnesses and the production of such books, papers, contracts, agreements, and documents as may be deemed by the board of arbitration material to a just determination of the matters submitted to its arbitration, and may for that purpose request the clerk of the district court of the United States for the district wherein said arbitration is being conducted to issue the necessary subpoenas, and upon such request the said clerk or his duly authorized deputy shall be, and he is, authorized, and it shall be his duty, to issue such subpoenas.

Any witness appearing before a board of arbitration shall receive the same fees and mileage as witnesses in courts of the United States, to be paid by the party securing the subpoena.
